... personalized care

Geri Crosby has more than 25 years of experience in getting people back on their feet. She works with patients in YVMC's New Mobility Program helping them begin their recovery from hip, shoulder or knee surgery.

Geri says, "The patients I work with enter the hospital frightened and immobile. I get them on their feet and give them confidence. I'm the first step in their rehabilitation."

It's Geri's job to teach patients how to use crutches or a walker in the hospital, but she says it takes a team effort to make sure the patient has the skills to be safe at home. "It's a family. We all care about each other and the patient. In a big city hospital, patients might be a number, but at YVMC they are a person. Our team goes above and beyond."
